What makes teaching materials so unique and revolutionary?

- > The first comprehensive set of materials to communicate with children through an actual human face.
- > Use of the communication method - children begin responding and speaking right away.
- > They bring children into the fun world of Wow!, which activates emotional memory and enables children to learn by experience.
- > When children are having fun, they naturally repeat what they hear. Correctly repeating sentences in English motivates them for further activities. Children feel successful as a result of their own active involvement.
- > They allow parents to find out everything that their child knows, and practise English with them at home.

What does a lesson look like?

- Lessons are fast-paced. There is a mixture of different activities so as not to lose the children's attention and so that they genuinely remember the words and sentences at the end of the lesson.
- The teacher has detailed, methodical, minute-by-minute lesson plans and is equipped with video material and other original teaching aids: flash cards and story cards, worksheets, a songbook, and so on. This all combines to make sure that lessons are always high-quality and the teachers are very well prepared.
- Native speaker of English Steve is on hand to help teachers with their lessons, as is his friend Maggie the magpie, a glove puppet, joined later by Bob the alien, who also appear in textbooks and videos.
- Children are continually drawn into the lesson - they listen, respond and speak!

The materials were developed by British company Wattsenglish, which specialises in teaching English to children from 3 to 11 years of age.
